Claimed Accounts

In a forthcoming release (Q1 2025), Bitwarden will introduce the ability for Enterprise organizations that have a verified domain to claim ownership of member accounts with a matching domain (e.g. j.doe@mycompany.com)

Claimed member accounts will be functionally owned by the organization, resulting in a few key changes to the way the account works:

Deletion of claimed accounts

Claimed member accounts will be able to be outright deleted by organization administrators, instead of only being able to be removed from the organization. If you become an organization member with a claimed account, it will be especially important that you are not storing any personal credentials in that account.

Note
Claimed accounts can be deleted from the Admin Console's Members page using the ⋮ options menu:

<input type="checkbox"/>	All	Name	Groups	Role	Policies
<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	11	[Redacted]		User	Revoke access Delete
<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	2	[Redacted]		User	⋮
<input type="checkbox"/>	1	[Redacted]		User	⋮

Members of your organization that do not have claimed accounts can only be Removed from the organization instead.

Restricted access to account actions

If you become an organization member with a claimed account, you will be restricted from:

- Modifying your account email address.
- Leaving the organization.
- Purging your vault.
- Deleting your account.
